High-Risk Coverage Said to Be Lloyd's Forte
JOURNAL OF COMMERCE (JC) - September 04, 1991
By: LEE COPPACK Journal of Commerce Special
Edition: Five Star Section: SPEC Page: 8C
Word Count: 1197

MEMO:
Journal of Commerce Special Report: REINSURANCE

TEXT:
Demand worldwide for reinsurance looks certain to grow, and it will probably be increasingly important for Lloyd's of...

...covers and professional indemnity insurance.

There are a number of reasons to expect growth in reinsurance overall: industry and commerce's desire to play a more active role in risk management...

...and things which it does badly. One of the things that it does well is reinsurance," said Jim Payne, chairman of broker E.W Payne, a subsidiary of Sedgwick Group PLC...

... Wetherell, chairman of the Lloyd's Non-Marine Underwriters Association, also claimed the amount of reinsurance written at Lloyd's will rise. He sees an increasing demand for coverage in areas...

...the very large, complex, high hazard risks."

Lloyd's is already a substantial force in reinsurance. In 1988, the last closed year of account, Lloyd's syndicates wrote total net premiums of $6.27 billion of which approximately half or $3.14 billion was reinsurance. In 1987 Swiss Re estimated worldwide reinsurance premium volume at $91.9 billion, and it is now likely to be over $100 billion, as most major participants have grown.

One reason for the growth in demand for reinsurance is the increase in captive insurance companies. At the start of 1991, consultants Tillinghast's...

...tax authorities can affect the nature of the business.

Mr. Payne stressed the responsibility of reinsurance to the insurance industry.

"Reinsurers are absolutely fundamental to underpinning the activity of insurers. They...

...gross liabilities. On the other hand, there is less recourse to pro-rata or proportional reinsurance as companies are keeping bigger retentions.

Although Lloyd's does not break down its figures so specifically, statistics from the London company reinsurance market have shown a sharp increase in the demand for excess of loss treaty reinsurance, but relatively static demand for proportional treaties particularly in property risks, where first-year incomes...

...1989 and rose nearly 200 percent for excess of loss treaties.

Excess of loss is reinsurance that obligates the reinsurer to indemnify the ceding company only for losses in excess of an agreed amount. Proportional is a form of reinsurance in which the insurer cedes a pro-rata share of every risk it writes.

Tim...

... Merrill Lynch explained, "Capacity in insurance markets remains high suggesting that the demand for proportional reinsurance is unlikely to grow relative to the total insurance market. On the other hand, companies ...

...use of skill."

Contrasts are sometimes drawn between the expert heavy staffs of the professional reinsurance companies and Lloyd's syndicates.

"Munich Re," said Tim Dawson, "has considerable reserves of expertise to write specialist reinsurance .

The underwriters have also tended to take an empirical approach. One leading reinsurance underwriter explained, on a syndicate writing about $150 million of business, the underwriters probably saw...

The effect of evidence of industry custom and practice and the parties' course of dealing on the application of "follow the fortunes" in reinsurance contracts.

... practice and the parties' course of dealing on the application of "follow the fortunes" in reinsurance contracts.

ABSTRACT: The onslaught of reinsurance litigation in recent years has been both a cause and a result of the changes in the traditional reinsurance relationship. In no area of reinsurance law has evidence of industry practice and the parties' conduct been given greater focus than in judicial decisions interpreting and applying the obligation of the reinsurer to indemnify the reinsured for settlements, referred to variously as "follow the fortunes," the "loss settlements doctrine..."
